Borderwall as architecture has become a controversial topic. Ronald Rael, in his book 'Borderwall as Architecture: A Manifesto for the U.S.-Mexico Border,' explores the sociocultural peculiarities and outlandish possibilities represented by the prominent structural element. Rael's work, reminiscent of Rem Koolhaas' 'Delirious New York,' assesses the border wall's impact on both architecture and society. The book is a protest against the wall and a projection about its future through a series of propositions suggesting that the nearly seven hundred miles of wall is an artistic and intellectual hand grenade of a book and a timely re-examination of what the physical barrier that divides the United States of America from the United Mexican States is and could be.

Ronald Rael is an architect and professor who has published extensively on the topic of border wall architecture. His work, 'Earth Architecture,' published in 2008, explores the history of building with earth in the modern era to exemplify new creative uses of the oldest building material on the planet. Rael's lecture on the international bank of commerce 2017-2018 keynote series at Texas A&M University in November 2017 is available on film.

Rael's lecture is described as a polarizing opinion on Trump's wall. The US-Mexico border wall may be a dumb idea, but the alternatives proposed in a new academic manifesto are too clever by half. The author and architect Rael suggests in his book 'Borderwall as Architecture: A Manifesto for the U.S.-Mexico Border.' The book is the topic of Rael's upcoming lecture for the International Bank of Commerce 2017-2018 keynote series at Texas A&M International University (TAMIU) Tuesday, November 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Center Ballroom.
